

CONTRIBUTORS

EVE BACHRACH is a writer, communications specialist, and managing editor of Boom. She has worked for the Los Angeles Review of Books, Curbed Los Angeles, Oxford University Press, and the British antipoverty organization War on Want.

ALLISON CARRUTH is an assistant professor of English and affiliate of the Institute of Environment and Sustainability at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the author of Global Appetites: American Power and the Literature of Food.

JON CHRISTENSEN is editor of Boom, a journalist, senior researcher in the California Center for Sustainable Communities, and an adjunct assistant professor in the Institute of the Environment and Sustainability and the Department of History at UCLA.

SHARON DOLOVICH is a professor at the UCLA School of Law and an expert on the law, policy, and theory of prisons and punishment. She recently served as deputy general counsel for the Los Angeles Citizens' Commission on Jail Violence.

ALESSANDRO DURANTI is a distinguished professor of anthropology and dean of social sciences at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the author of "On the Future of Anthropology: Fundraising, the job market and the corporate turn," a provocative recent essay in the journal Anthropological Theory.

MIRIAM GREENBERG is an associate professor of sociology and the director of the Urban Studies Research Cluster at the University of California, Santa Cruz, and the author of Branding New York: How a City in Crisis was Sold to the World.

JAN GOGGANS is an associate professor in the School of Social Sciences, Humanities and Arts at UC Merced. She is the author of California on the Breadlines Dorothea Lange, Paul Taylor, and the Making of a New Deal Narrative.

HUGH HART is a freelance writer whose work has appeared in Wired, Fast Company's Co.Create website, NewYorker.com, the Los Angeles Times, and the New York Times. He was nominated for the 2013 Mirror Award for best digital media article.

URSULA K. HEISE is a professor of English at UCLA and author of several books, including Sense of Place and Sense of Planet: The Environmental Imagination of the Global.

JENNIFER HOLT is an associate professor of film and media studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Her new coauthored book, Connected Viewing: Selling, Streaming, and Sharing Media in the Digital Age, will be published in 2014.

THAD KOUSSER is an associate professor of political science at the University of California, San Diego, and the coauthor and editor of several books, including The Power of American Governors.

JOSH KUN is an associate professor of communication and journalism at the Annenberg School of Journalism at the University of Southern California. He is the author of several books, including most recently Songs in the Key of LA.

KRISTIN MILLER is a Ph.D. student studying urban sociology at UC Santa Cruz, with an emphasis in film and digital media. She is part of the Critical Sustainabilities research group, and has worked as a travel journalist and blogger on cities, technology, and the environment.

KIM STANLEY ROBINSON is the author of many works of science fiction, including The Three Californias, a trilogy of novels about southern California; the Mars Trilogy; 2312, a novel about climate change; and his most recent novel, Shaman.

REBECCA ROBINSON is a writer, editor, and communications strategist. She has worked as a staff writer for Monterey County Weekly, a radio producer for Oregon Public Broadcasting, and an editor for the solutions journalism website Dowser.org.

ABBY SMITH RUMSEY has served as director of the Scholarly Communication Institute and worked with the Library of Congress's National Digital Information Infrastructure and Preservation Program to develop strategies to identify, collect, and preserve digital content of long-term value.

DANIEL SPERLING is founding director of the Institute of Transportation Studies at the University of California, Davis, and author or coauthor of more than 200 articles, reports and books, including Two Billion Cars: Driving Toward Sustainability.

H. BRADLEY SHAFFER is a distinguished professor of ecology and evolutionary biology at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the director of the La Kretz Center for California Conservation Science, a part of the UCLA Institute of the Environment and Sustainability.

ANDY WALKER is a geneticist, professor, and Louis P. Martini-endowed chair in viticulture in the Department of Viticulture and Enology in the School of Agricultural and Environmental Sciences at the University of California, Davis.

BENJAMIN ALDES WURGAFT is an intellectual historian and writer whose work has appeared in Gastronomica, History and Theory and other journals and magazines. Formerly a postdoctoral fellow at the New School, he is currently a National Science Foundation postdoctoral fellow at MIT, where he is starting a new project on food, biotechnology and the history of the future.

MICHAEL ZISER is an associate professor of English at UC Davis and director of the Environmental Humanities Supercluster. He is the author of Environmental Practice and Early American Literature.